

City Outlines Plan to Ease Traffic on Olympic and Pico

The City of L.A. today outlined a new plan that promises to cut seven minutes from the commute along two of the city's busiest east-west streets: Olympic and Pico Boulevards. Seven minutes doesn't sound like much, but to anyone who drives across Los Angeles during rush hour, seven minutes can be an eternity. KPCC's Nick Roman says the plan won't get you from here to eternity, just across town a little faster.

{mosframe http://www.scrp.org/news/stories/2007/11/26/18_olympic_pico_112607.html,100%,500}